

Conservation— Giving back to nature

Naveen grew up in a museum campus, but rather than falling for history, he fell in love with nature. Whatever the reasons, Biology turned out to be his favourite subject and the chirping of birds, his favourite sound.

Currently managing the Conservation Education Centre (CEC), BNHS, Delhi, located at Asola Bhatti Wildlife Sanctuary in Delhi, Naveen feels like it's a dream come true. He says, "CEC is the mother of all conservation organisations of India whose natural history collection is considered as natural heritage."

A graduate in Forestry from Forest

Green
LIVING

College and Research Institute of Mettupalayam,

Coimbatore, Naveen is an avid bird watcher, and environment-friendly is his way of life. He ensures he doesn't litter, avoids carrying plastic bags, takes computer prints on both sides of the paper and is judicious in using space while writing on paper. In addition, he donates his old clothes at Sai Baba Mandir and does not waste electricity at all. The green efforts are a daily habit!

