

Save trees, save creation

The drive by ISKCON and NGO, Compassionate Living

started with devotional songs in praise of Lord Krishna.

ISKCON temple priests took the Kirtan to the streets

Later, books on Lord Krishna were distributed among locals. "Though there were few residents, it was nice to meet the few who came out to paint the names of trees. 10 trees were named too," shares Padma Diwedi, convenor of Compassionate Living.

Vidhya Viswanathan, a resident from N block says, "I brought my daughter along for this drive. I think it is better to involve people, than just preach about how and why they should care. My daughter now cares tremendously for the tree she has named Lakshmi."

Residents in the area are planning to organize the drive again so that more people can be involved in planting greenery in the area.
